The 4-County Cooperative Weed Management Area (CWMA) is sponsoring this free half-day event as a way for area land managers and environmental professionals to exchange ideas, hear about the latest in local weed management, and make new connections. In the world of invasive plant species, the landscape can change a great deal in a year - come and find out what those changes are.

The agenda features a diverse series of talks from professional peers, a choice of break-out sessions, a networking period, and a keynote talk by Andrea Thorpe from the Institute for Applied Ecology. To take advantage of the opportunity to update others about your program, you are invited to display a poster in the event's networking room. We hope to see you there!

The mission of the 4-County Cooperative Weed Management Area, comprising Clackamas, Clark, Multnomah, and Washington Counties, is to create and support collaborative weed management in the greater Portland area. Because noxious weeds extend across boundaries, effective management depends on effective partnerships.
